BURN PREVENTION NETWORK

From Financial Gaps to Full Confidence

The Challenge

When Corisa joined Burn Prevention Network, she stepped into an organization doing powerful work—but struggling behind the scenes with financial systems that couldn't keep up.

The chart of accounts was confusing and duplicative. Financial statements lacked consistency and accuracy. And the organization didn't have the systems in place to track restricted vs. unrestricted funds—creating risk around funder compliance and long-term sustainability.

“We needed to be able to track by program and by line item,” Corisa shared. “But the structure just wasn’t there, and that was creating real problems.”

Vendor payments were handled manually, documentation was scattered, and reports offered no analysis—leaving board members unsure how to interpret the numbers.

“There were no summaries, no insights,” she said. “We were handing over financials without giving our board the tools to understand them.”

And while the organization wasn't in a place to hire full-time finance staff, it was clear they needed high-level expertise and reliable support to move forward.

The Solution

The Charity CFO partnered with Burn Prevention Network to modernize their financial systems and rebuild trust in the numbers—without requiring a full-time hire.

Structured systems & tech support.

TCCFO helped implement cloud-based tools like Dext and Bill.com to reduce the manual burden and create visibility across the organization.

Clear, consistent reporting.

Corisa now receives board-ready monthly financials with summary insights that are actually useful to decision-makers.

Funder-focused grant tracking.

TCCFO helped reconfigure the chart of accounts and reporting process to allow for proper classification of restricted vs. unrestricted funds—mitigating risk and improving compliance.

Expert guidance—on demand.

From real-time questions to board-level analysis, the team provided depth of support across multiple levels.

“Reid is amazing—he’s responsive, detailed, and always follows through. Pat brings strategic insight that’s helped improve how we present our financials to the board.”

The Impact

- ✓ Confidence in the numbers.
Corisa shared that she now feels sure the numbers are accurate—and knows exactly where to find what she needs.
- ✓ Improved internal processes.
Modern systems mean less time chasing down paper invoices and more time focusing on mission.
- ✓ Board and funder readiness.
Monthly reporting now includes board-friendly summaries and visual indicators, helping non-financial stakeholders better understand performance and trends.
- ✓ Scalable financial expertise.
By partnering with TCCFO, Burn Prevention Network gets high-level financial oversight without needing to overhire—or settle for underqualified help.

“More nonprofits should be working with a team like The Charity CFO. This work is too complex for generalists—and your team actually follows through.”

Corisa's Advice to Other Nonprofits

“There are a lot of people out there doing bookkeeping who shouldn't be—especially in the nonprofit space. If you want someone who understands the complexity, keeps you compliant, and helps you tell the financial story to your board and funders, work with The Charity CFO.” - Corissa Rolon, Burn Prevention Network
